Sparkling Jewellery Set

By ALICE ALDEN

THIS is certainly the season for sparkling necklaces. Surely makers of fine costume pieces owe a vote of thanks to the deep necklines and the strapless bodices that are needed for the perfect complement. Truly designed, a very handsome, but necklace, it is an elegant, sophisticated piece of jewelry. It is a necklace that is a masterpiece of design. It is a necklace that is a masterpiece of design. It is a necklace that is a masterpiece of design.

This Is What Usually Happens When You Correct Your Child

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

AS many parents of several children know, an older child will sometimes interfere with the correction of a younger brother or sister. He may do it in one of two opposite ways: he may try to punish the younger child or try to supplement your punishment of him.

I well remember an instance in our family when the eldest was about twelve and the youngest five. While we were at the dinner table I felt occasion to rebuke the youngest. Then his brother, the eldest, added his few words of rebuke and exhortation. Turning to him, I said: "As your mother and I have been about ready, need to be, to punish the younger child, you know a better way to help him."

It often happens that a father who has "two lads" after the fashion of the old-time child, sometimes his remarks do help to punish the child. But he is back of the mother. More often such aid is only serve to create both the child and mother. What really prompts the father to do this, usually, is his feeling that he is the final authority and wishes to announce this feeling.

The Grandparents

Grandma or grandpa may be the one who after either parent has rebuked the child. Wise parents will calmly remind the grandparent that as she or the father of both parents are present, the grandparent will not be taking on the burden of discipline.

So often a grandparent will intervene for the child, especially the young child, because he is not sure of his own authority. After a parent has corrected him, the grandparent may feel that he is not sure of his own authority. After a parent has corrected him, the grandparent may feel that he is not sure of his own authority.

Older Child

If an older child of your family is not sure of his own authority, he may try to punish the younger child. He may do it in one of two opposite ways: he may try to punish the younger child or try to supplement your punishment of him.

Whether an older child tries to add punishment or rebuke after you have corrected a younger child or tries to keep you from punishing the child, your punishment words might not work if these don't announce to him at a quiet time that he must never interfere again and what the penalty will be if he does.

It is wonderful when the father and mother convenant to abide by a plan according to which, when one is rebuking or punishing,

Detachable Over Skirt

Mr Cotten Wants To Be A Clown

By PATRICIA CLARY

WELL, perhaps there's something about being a clown. I don't know, but I know that I want to be a clown. I want to be a clown. I want to be a clown.

Now Joseph Cotten, who has been a clown for many years, is going to be a clown. He is going to be a clown. He is going to be a clown.

"I don't mind saying that I want to be a clown," Cotten said. "I want to be a clown. I want to be a clown. I want to be a clown."

Give Arms Beauty Treatment

By HELEN FOLLETT

LET'S out with the truth! Women, with all their beautiful forms, neglect their arms. Spend five or ten extra minutes, sprinkling borated talcum atop the cream, forming a pack. Tap and slap. Then wring large Turkish towels out of steaming hot water and wrap around your arms.

You will be surprised at the results. If there are redness, give a special bleaching treatment now and then. This is accomplished by scrubbing the arms briskly with warm soap suds and a bath brush, rinsing and drying gently, then sprinkling the skin surface with a lotion made by combining equal parts of peroxide and strained lemon juice. Elbows seldom look as well as finger tips, kneading the knuckles, make a finger bracelet around your wrist and keep it moving upward, twisting your fingers there.

A Dinner That Is Different

CHIEF, today we're going to have a slightly different sort of dinner. I'd like to tell you about it. I'd like to tell you about it. I'd like to tell you about it.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different. It's a dinner that is different.

She's Telling You!

Janet Almond, four, of Arlington, Virginia, gives a friendly warning to stay away from her. The tot visited a mare which had a cold, and apparently picked up some of its germs. But Janet believes that warnings should be issued about such things, and she's doing her part.

Household Hints

TO easily clean the grids of a waffle iron, place a paper napkin soaked with household ammonia between the grids, and leave it overnight. The ammonia loosens the brown, "cooked on" accumulation of grease. It may then be wiped off with steel wool. This cleaning method is often used also for the inside of ovens.

To clean artificial flowers, put salt or cornmeal about one inch deep into a paper bag. Put flowers in, close the top and shake gently.

PICTORIAL NEWSFRONT

RABBIT ROYALTY—This little girl receives a royal audience by the king of rabbits, Jeannot I, and his queen at an exhibition in Paris. The show, called "Childhood, Youth and Family," featured various exhibits of family activities and a toy show, and was held in the Grand Palace Exhibition Hall.

WORM'S EYE VIEW—Spectators appear to be specks on the horizon as they view the U.S. Air Force's giant B-36 bomber at the Los Angeles International Airport. Behind the crowd watching the bomber is a B-50. An estimated 200,000 spectators turned out for the event, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

MIXED RELATIONS—Larry McKown, of St Joseph, Missouri, holds a six-week-old English duck in one hand and the White King pigeon that hatched it in the other. After the mother duck was killed by chickens, McKown put three eggs under the pigeon, which hatched two of them. Only this one survived.

HOLY YEAR SCARF—An Italian girl in Rome models one of the religious souvenir scarfs which will be available there during Holy Year.

FOR A WORTHY CAUSE—Danish soprano Lis Broge, in New York to make her American concert debut, and Micky Gundmann, also from Denmark, receive some blocks of anti-TB seal stamps from comedian Jimmy Durante, who is definitely not from Denmark. All three campaigned hard for a worthy cause.

HAPPY TO MEET YOU—Gail Bassett, aged three, introduces her pooch, Happy, to actress Rhonda Fleming on a Hollywood film set. Gail is the daughter of a studio gateman, and Miss Fleming and her co-stars, John Payne and Dennis O'Keefe, want to sponsor the child's screen career.

GOING SCOTCH—Hollywood actress Patricia Neal tries something new for an evening gown. The material is a striking blue, green and yellow plaid sent from Scotland by a weaver who suggested the idea to her.

SEEING THE BIG TOWN—Midshipmen of the French Navy look out over New York from the top of the Empire State Building. The future naval officers were from the French cruiser Jeanne D'Arc, which is taking them on its annual training cruise.

WHEN SIR STAFFORD BET ON HORSES

by CHARLES WINTOUR

LITTLE Stafford Cripps was only four when his mother died. Perhaps that family tragedy goes further than any other fact to explain the remarkable character of Britain's vegetarian Chancellor.

For the death of Theresa Cripps described by a sister as "an ex-eyed, full, sentimental, full of self, an indulgent, full of gold" left her children in the sole care of their father, a successful barrister, Sir Alfred Cripps, Q.C., later Lord Parmoor.

It was his father's character, his father's career, and his father's beliefs which therefore exercised an unchallenged influence during Sir Stafford's formative years, as Eric Estorick calls them in his most unexceptional portrait.

Favourite child

OF course, Staffie was regarded as a remarkable child from the first when he was only 15 months old his mother described him as "a little, full of life, a great brain development."

Soon Staffie was the centre of the family. His brother Leonard, later a shipowner and fervent Conservative, still sounds slightly envious about the blatant favoritism. "Others of us may have felt neglected while our little infant brother absorbed the spotlight and began to create a sort of controlling interest in our nursery."

He adds: "Stafford's whims, cracks and judgments in his very early childhood were achieved with great care and solemnity and obtained for him the nickname of 'Dad.'"

• Sir Stafford Cripps, by Eric Estorick, Heinemann, 21s.

At the university a Radical he became, in due course, a Tory MP, was knighted by Edward VII, given a peerage by the Liberals and elevated to the Cabinet by Ramsay MacDonald. He left the Socialist Party in 1930, presumably in protest against his son's expulsion from the party.

The coming thread linking this variegated political career was his religion. Parmoor was an ardent churchman, and from the first impressed his children with the need to make Christianity the centre of their lives.

In this respect his influence on his youngest son has certainly proved profound and lasting. The coming thread linking this variegated political career was his religion. Parmoor was an ardent churchman, and from the first impressed his children with the need to make Christianity the centre of their lives.

Cripps finance

At the time however Sir Alfred, not I have had to decide. The Cripps boys were given exceptional freedom at Westminster, and entertained their friends at local hotels and clubs. Dear old "Dad" or "Dad-in-law" as Stafford sometimes called himself, could buy a bicycle and then tell his father, "I thought you would like to give it to me. If you would you could send me a cheque for £100."

At the same time he informed his father of an unfortunate "investment" in the Derby. It is difficult to imagine the bane of the bookies having a modest flutter today.

Cripps' academic career, of course, was brilliant. Although he always intended to follow his father at the Bar, he had specialised in science, won scholarships, and at 22 was the youngest student ever to read a paper before the Royal Society.

Riches lie ahead— if you know where to look

FIFTY years ago the idea of Empire was almost forgotten. The Colonies, as the Dominions were called, were expected one day to hivel off from the Mother Country.

The tropical dependencies were welcome to send us produce in competition with all other sources provided not a penny of our money was spent on them.

Every kind of trading preference had been scrapped in the previous 50 years of unorganised free importation.

But there were stirrings and forebodings. Germany and the U.S.A. were challenging Britain's export trade and dumping their surpluses from their own highly protected markets. Unemployment was creeping into the cities.

One man alone had other ideas of Empire than mere drift. The most controversial figure of his time, most disliked, most adored—Joe Chamberlain.

WE SHOULD SINK money in developing our overseas estates contrary to all tradition. WE SHOULD BUILD railways and harbours in Africa. STUDY tropical health and agriculture. DEFY foreign Governments which subsidised their trade to the destruction of our colonial producers in the West Indies.

Joe Chamberlain had a more revolutionary idea. We could only get foreign tariffs down by threatening retaliation. We could only knit the Empire together by giving and receiving preferential treatment. He resigned office in 1903 to devote himself to Tariff Reform.

In that same year 1903 a conference of "Dominion" Prime Ministers in London "respectfully" urged the British Government to grant preferences, declaring that this system alone would stimulate trade and strengthen the Empire.

Canada established preferences in 1906. In succeeding years South Africa, New Zealand, and finally Australia in 1907, granted preferences to Britain.

Our exports to these countries doubled in a few years. No response from us. No preference granted by Britain to them right on until 1919.

Chamberlain's policy split the Tory Party, which always has a group of Free Traders in it. Several Ministers resigned, and in 1908 the Tory Government itself was defeated by the Free Trade Liberals on the "Stomach tax" and "Your food will cost you more."

The Chamberlain vision faded. The money that would have spanned Africa or Australia with railways was poured into developing the Argentine and Brazil.

Imports into Britain from the Empire rose from £248 million in 1932 to £371 million in 1938. Exports from Britain to the Empire rose from £105 million in 1932 to £235 million in 1938. For the first time in our history, in the year 1934, our exports of manufactured goods to the Empire exceeded in value those in all foreign countries.

Already in 1938 the Tory Government was whittling away its Empire preference. It agreed at America's request to abolish timber duties, to cancel the duty of 2s a quarter on wheat, and promised never to increase the tobacco preference for Africa, Canada, and India.

Today the Socialist Government has created new obstacles to advance in Empire trade. In return for the American Loan, it agreed not to discriminate in its trade. It has agreed in principle to the reduction of our low rate of tariffs and to the elimination of preferences.

On the other hand Governments today are much more conscious of their colonial estate and spend sums on local improvements which were unthinkable 50 years ago. That's where we are. Where could we have been?

But in the ten years 1919-29 the scope of this policy was quite limited, and the great staples of Empire production meat and wheat never entered the picture at all.

Then in June 1929 a manifesto broke like an electric storm on politics when the Tories had once again gone down and the timorous Ramsay MacDonald Government was being kept in power by Liberal support.

Who is for the Empire? That was its title. It was a shock. The Empire had been forgotten again.

But now once more one man of vision was to make Empire the foremost issue in political life. He was Lord Beaverbrook.

His plan then was as it now is. Duties on imports of foreign foodstuffs, free entry of Empire produce. Customs Union with the Colonies, free trade as far as practicable with the Dominions. Empire Free Trade, he calls it.

First in articles, then in speeches through the constituencies, in stormy by-elections, he argued and pleaded his cause.

In the General Election of 1931, between October 13 and 26, he addressed massed audiences at Limehouse, Camberwell, Dartmouth, Battersea, Acton, Birkenhead, Liverpool, Manchester, Fulham, Camden Town, London Hippodrome, and Newquay (Cornwall).

The National Government was returned triumphant and committed to its men of vision.

But the British Government refused to give a tariff preference to Empire meat. The great chance was lost. The Ottawa Agreement, nevertheless, formed the first time a basis of reciprocal Empire trade. Guaranteed allocations by quota were made for Empire produce in the home market.

Exports from Britain to the Empire rose from £105 million in 1932 to £235 million in 1938. For the first time in our history, in the year 1934, our exports of manufactured goods to the Empire exceeded in value those in all foreign countries.

CHINESE REDS EXPECTED TO STEP UP POLITICAL OFFENSIVE IN SE ASIA

Singapore, Jan. 19.—Britain's leading strategists here in Singapore, convinced that sooner or later China's Communist leaders will reveal expansionist aims, are preparing for a stepping up of the political offensive from that quarter. They believe that the test of 1950 is whether or not the Chinese Communists will need force of arms to achieve their objectives.

SPAARK URGED TO ACCEPT OEEC JOB

Washington, Jan. 19.—The U.S. Secretary of State, Mr. Dean Acheson, today urged M. Paul Henri Spaak, former Belgian Premier, to accept the proposed job as head of the Marshall Plan organization in Europe.

Mr. Spaak, 50, is a member of the State Department, with the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys, attending.

Mr. Acheson said he cannot say that he will accept a proposal which has not yet been made. "I do not know of the proposal," he said, "and what the conditions will be if it is made."

Mr. Spaak was referring to the fact that the 16-nation Organization for European Economic Co-operation must decide to create the post and then offer the job formally.

This has not yet been done. President Harry Truman urged Mr. Spaak yesterday to accept the job.

Some countries, including Britain and the Scandinavian nations, are reported as being only mildly interested in the idea being promoted by the United States.

The United States believes that by naming a top ranking West European diplomat as its head, the OEEC will be able to move more quickly in dispensing with European trade barriers.

CRIPPS BRIEFED

London, Jan. 19.—Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was briefed at a Cabinet Economic Committee meeting here today for his visit to Paris next week to attend meetings of the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation.

Experts of the OEEC have been working overtime to complete a report on the end of the month an interim report on the progress since the 1948-49 financial year.

The report will be submitted first to the 16-nation governing Council of the OEEC, then to the Economic Co-operation Administration and, finally, to the United States Congress.

Taught Churchill To Paint

Dublin, Jan. 19.—James Connolly, a famous Irish revolutionary, today at the Royal Hibernian Academy, of which he was President.

Mr. Connolly was born in County Armagh. At one time he was a London studio where he specialised in portraits. Mr. Churchill took painting lessons from him in 1915.

He was appointed President and keeper of the Hibernian Academy last October. He died in his living quarters there.

Yugoslav Minister Replaced

Belgrade, Jan. 19.—Nikola Brozina, Yugoslav Minister to Israel, has been relieved of his duty and recalled, Tanjug, the official Yugoslav news agency, reported here today.

It was announced that M. Brozina would be replaced by M. Nikola Milicevic, former Chancellor to the Yugoslav Foreign Ministry, the agency said.—Reuters.

Many observers here consider that the fundamental policy of the Communists in their plan to control South-east Asia is to install pro-Communist governments in the various countries by means of political infiltration.

First on the list to come under pressure they say would be Siam, Thailand and Vietnam, which possess the rice that is the mainstay of other parts of the region.

Mr. Spaak, a high level official of the Marshall Plan, said that the Communists are likely to be successful in their plan to install pro-Communist governments in the various countries by means of political infiltration.

EMBARRASSING

The Chinese in Malaya are very unpopular, more than half of the total population. Recognition by the Chinese Government of Malaya would be a serious blow to the many thousands of influential Chinese in Southeast Asia who are to be regarded as the new regime to build up trade and provide foreign currency.

Nevertheless, observers here believe that Mao Tse-tung's Chinese People's Government would secretly help Malaya separatists whose campaign has considerable mass value and must be kept alive if the Communist movement in Southeast Asia is to be followed.

THE ONLY HOPE

One of the main objects of the Chinese in Malaya is to reduce the number of Chinese who can be counted by each Chinese community as may be installed by the Chinese regime in Peking.

Building Nation

The Malayan defence plan is, too, are busy weighing up future possibilities on the shape of the probable potential of the Chinese Communist Army in a territorial war.

FACING FAMINE

The Chinese Communists, it is stressed here, have much to do to build up the disrupted economy of their country, restore communications and provide adequate food supplies for areas facing famine.

Whatever 1950 has in store for Malaya, experts here believe that the next six months may furnish clues to the political fate of the wavering countries in Southern Asia.

U.S. Representation At Vatican

Washington, Jan. 19.—President Truman told a press conference today that the question of continuing representation at the Vatican and appointing a successor to Mr. Myron Taylor were both under study at the State Department.

Mr. Taylor's resignation was announced last night.—Reuters.

Vietnam (French Indo-China): The final phase of what has become known as the Bao Dai experiment is getting underway following the transfer of power by the French Government to the Vietnam Government. It now remains to be seen whether the genuine nationalists will fall away from the Communist-dominated Vietminh and rally round the French-sponsored government.

FRENCH HOPE

In the meantime, Moscow-trained Dr. Ho Chi-minh controls a large part of the territory but the French and Vietminh forces are intensifying the struggle for the rice-growing and coal-mining areas which count economically.

The French hope that the threat of Chinese Communist troops on the Tonkin border will win support for the French Government but every one except the Communists admits that the French armed forces will have to stay in Vietnam at present for security reasons.

With the growing belief that effective backing from the anti-Communist bloc is not to be relied upon, the anti-Communist policy is being moderated.

THE ONLY HOPE

One of the main objects of the Chinese in Malaya is to reduce the number of Chinese who can be counted by each Chinese community as may be installed by the Chinese regime in Peking.

Building Nation

The Malayan defence plan is, too, are busy weighing up future possibilities on the shape of the probable potential of the Chinese Communist Army in a territorial war.

FACING FAMINE

The Chinese Communists, it is stressed here, have much to do to build up the disrupted economy of their country, restore communications and provide adequate food supplies for areas facing famine.

Whatever 1950 has in store for Malaya, experts here believe that the next six months may furnish clues to the political fate of the wavering countries in Southern Asia.

PAKISTANIS ROUSED OVER KASHMIR

Kashmir, Jan. 19.—An angry Parliament today accused the United Nations of failing to give Pakistan a fair deal on the Kashmir issue.

One delegate said he would rather see the former princely state in Soviet hands than have it go to India.

India and Pakistan ended a shooting war over the Kashmir area under a U.N. cease fire order on January 1, 1949, but the Security Council has never been able to get complete agreement for a vote by the population on which country it prefers to join.—Associated Press.

U.S. Representation At Vatican

Washington, Jan. 19.—President Truman told a press conference today that the question of continuing representation at the Vatican and appointing a successor to Mr. Myron Taylor were both under study at the State Department.

Mr. Taylor's resignation was announced last night.—Reuters.

No Big Changes In American Export Controls

Washington, Jan. 19.—Commerce Department officials said today they believed their present system of export controls are adequate to prevent any strategic American materials from reaching Russia by way of the "back door" through Communist China despite the fact that the Reds now control virtually all China and are recognised by Britain and other governments.

For that reason no considerable changes are planned in the present licensing system for the Far East, although there may be minor "alterations."

Meanwhile Commerce Department officials said they were continuing licensed exports of war potential materials to the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa. This class of materials includes aviation gasoline.

Export licenses for arms had been suspended since the Chinese Nationalists had been driven from the mainland. The Commerce Department said it was not prepared to make any change in its policy.

SEVERAL TESTS

The export control officials explained that when the Commerce Department receives a request for a license for the export of any item on the "prohibited list" which includes items of strategic value or in short supply, it enlists the assistance of the State and other departments to determine whether the consignment is accurately described and whether he intends any transshipment.

It then applies several factors as a test in granting a license.

1. Whether the shipment is in the United States.
2. Whether he has adequate money to finance the transaction.
3. Availability of the goods in the United States.

After a license is granted, the United States follows it through to the destination. Also, through the co-operation of foreign officials in friendly countries, it checks on whether any transshipment is provided for in the application for the license, has taken place.

MANIFESTS SUPPLIED

At Hongkong, the British have been supplying copies of all shipping manifests on outgoing goods to the American Consulate to permit such a check.

Other methods of checking can be utilised at other points. While American officials do not say flatly that no licence

INTELLIGENCE TEST SOLUTION

This test, though on familiar lines, introduces a new idea. Call the publication A B C D E, call their pseudonyms A J K L M. Then construct the following scheme:

EWART

Each of the letters A J M P T must appear once in each column and once in each row. But, since each writer knows his own pseudonym, he will know his own column and row. And so, if he must be T, he must be A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, S, T, U, V, W, X, Y, Z.

Sudden Death Of Ethiopian Diplomat

Geneva, Jan. 19.—Mr. Tesfrie Tegagne, Ethiopian Minister to France, and his nation's observer at the U.N. Trusteeship Council Committee meetings on an agreement for Italian trusteeship over Somaliland, died unexpectedly in his hotel at Geneva on Wednesday night. Friends said he suffered a heart attack.

The death of the diplomat was announced at today's session of the Committee by Chairman Max Henrique Unreña, of the Dominican Republic. A moment of silence was observed by the Committee in memory of the Ethiopian observer.

Mr. Tegagne, with Abebe Betto, Ethiopian Ambassador to the United Kingdom, attended all meetings of the Committee during which the draft agreement was argued.

Mr. Tegagne's death came only a few hours after the final draft was completed.

Brusasca said he had spoken to Mr. Tegagne only a few days ago, and the Ethiopian diplomat spoke of his great desire to see friendly collaboration between Italy and Ethiopia re-established.

"We will try to honour his memory and do everything possible that friendship be restored between Ethiopia and Italy," Brusasca said.

Cerulli, in expressing his regret, said he had known Mr. Tegagne and had been a friend of his for a number of years under "very difficult circumstances for both of us."—Associated Press.

NEW RAILWAY STEAMER

Clyde Bank, Scotland, Jan. 19.—The new British railway steamer, which will be used in the Harwick-Hankow-Holland route, was launched today.

Mrs. Den Hollander, wife of a President of the Netherlands Railways, christened the vessel just before it slid down the ways to the yard of John Brown and Company Ltd.

The steamer will carry 57 passengers and a crew of 70. It is designed for a speed of 14 knots. Associated Press.
